Course Content and VPS' profile	This proposal is based on a critical and operational geographical setting and it is a field research experience. In this workshop, students will be introduced to key concepts in geography, within a hands-on, collaborative workshop that combines theory with practical fieldwork. Students will draw upon the concepts of space, place and identity (spazio / territorio / identità) within a workshop designed around the collection of individual and subjective. In practice, across several weeks, groups of two students will interview a person of their choice (such as a neighbour, a family-member, an acquaintance) in a urban setting chosen by this person, gaining insight into why this particular place is important to them. They will document this discussion through photography and/or sketching and by collecting other relevant visual material. Students will thus gain experience in doing simple 'walk-along' interview with one person; they will learn how to collect relevant visual and narrative material including maps; and will acquire skills in presenting their results using visual methods. In practice, each duo of students will produce a 2 pages visual portfolio, the best examples of which can be shared online or in a short printed document. The output of the workshop will therefore be a collective and voluntarily subjective snapshot or mosaic of urban life in Cagliari, narrated and literally made visible within a collective project.
